Suburban Oasis
The client envisioned an experience-driven space centered around a walk-in, swim-in grotto with dual entrances, a jump platform, a swim-up bar with glowing fiber-optic seating, and a sprawling integrated spa. Layered throughout the design were resort-inspired details, including sunken lounges, a reef ledge, fire and water features, an outdoor kitchen, and multiple televisions positioned for seamless entertaining.

ISA Article Shows The Role of Species Selection
An article by Martins Moraes et al. published in the September 2026 issue of Aboriculture & Urban Forestry evaluated the "floristic composition" of 5 old plazas and 5 new plazas in Northern Brazil, determining that the decrease in canopy cover in newer plazas was tied to the lack of management and inadequate species selection. The article proposes that prioritizing native species would allow urban governments to increase the canopy cover without taxing the labor and infrastructure around maintaining a public landscape.
