

Tributary, a design and construction consulting firm specializing in luxury residential and commercial projects, is on a mission: to craft world-class backyards across the country and around the world, especially in underserved areas. Using skills learned while creating their own highly acclaimed projects and through the Genesis educational programs, Tributary's three award-winning designers are at the forefront of superior design that combines state-of-the-art pools with exquisite landscaping, hardscaping, and outdoor living elements.

Tributary's three partners, Shane LeBlanc of Atlanta, Kurt Kraisinger of Kansas City and Jeromey Naugle of Phoenix, believe that education is what sets the best professionals apart. Certified by the Society of Watershape Designers, all three value the strength of unity within their industry. "We are offering consulting services as well as training sessions and retreats for elite pool designers and builders," explains LeBlanc. "We believe by pooling our resources, everyone wins—the client as well as the industry."
